Terms of Service – Personal Development Coaching

This form provides you, the client, with information that is additional to that detailed in the accompanying Notice of Privacy Practices and it is subject to HIPAA preemptive analysis.

CONFIDENTIALITY

All information disclosed within sessions and the written records pertaining to those sessions are confidential and will not be revealed to anyone without your written permission except where disclosure is required by law. This includes situations where your provider believes that there is a risk of you harming yourself or someone else, or that abuse of a child or vulnerable adult is taking place in the present or has taken place in the past (whether or not you are directly involved). Disclosure may also be required pursuant to a legal proceeding by or against you, or to collect payment from an insurance company, Employee Assistance Program, or via a collections agency in cases of nonpayment. When more than one person is present for a session, confidentiality does not apply between those people unless otherwise agreed upon. Your case may be discussed among staff in the agency in case consultations for the purpose of providing better guidance and coaching services. If your case is discussed with other professionals outside the agency, identifying information will be altered in order to preserve your anonymity and confidentiality.

PROCESS OF COACHING AND SCOPE OF PRACTICE

Your provider is Caitlin Hill. Caitlin is a clinical sociologist and a personal development coach. She is not a licensed medical professional or a psychotherapist. If needed, she will refer you to the appropriate professionals for matters that fall outside her scope of services, including but not limited to:

- Mental illness
- Trauma
- Medical concerns
- Personality disorders
- Suicidality
- Financial Planning
- Legal Issues
- Emergency situations

Nothing discussed in your sessions should be taken as medical, legal, or financial advice, or as anything beyond suggestions for personal growth. Working toward this growth requires effort on your part. Personal development requires your very active involvement, honesty, and openness in order to achieve change in your thoughts, feelings, and/or behavior.

As a coach, Caitlin will seek to help you in a variety of ways apart from psychotherapy, including but not limited to:

- Setting and achieving personal and professional goals
- Making realistic and practicable plans for making change in your life
- Managing life problems such as stress, relationship issues, anger problems, decision-making, work-life balance, and more.
- Identifying internal and external barriers to decision-making and personal development
- Referring you to other professionals as necessary for concerns outside her scope of practice

Note: While personal development coaching does not treat mental illness, that does not mean that people living with a mental illness cannot also benefit from coaching to help them in the ways described above. If you have questions about what you can expect from a Personal Development Coach, please feel free to ask Caitlin or reach back out to the Baltimore Therapy Center at 443-598-2821.

Coaching may lead you to make changes in your life that you were not originally intending. Coaching may result in decisions about changing behaviors, employment, schooling, housing, or relationships. Sometimes a decision that is positive for one family member is viewed negatively by another family member. Change will sometimes be easy and swift, but more often it will be slow and even frustrating, with backsliding being a normal part of the process. There is no guarantee that coaching will yield positive or intended results.

LITIGATION LIMITATION

Due to the nature of the coaching process and the fact that it often involves making a full disclosure with regard to many matters which may be of a confidential nature, it is agreed that, should there be legal proceedings (such as, but not limited to divorce and custody disputes, injuries, lawsuits, etc.), neither you nor your attorney(s), nor anyone else acting on your behalf will call on Baltimore Therapy Center staff to testify in court or at any other proceeding, nor will a disclosure of the any records that may or may not be kept be requested unless otherwise agreed upon.

PAYMENTS & INSURANCE REIMBURSEMENT

Clients are expected to pay the standard fee of $120 per 45-minute session at the end of each session unless other arrangements have been made. Clients who have made a payment by credit card will have their card number securely stored and charged automatically after each session attended or cancelled less than 24 hours in advance. Please notify your provider if any problems arise during the course of therapy regarding your ability to make timely payments.

Sessions that are missed or cancelled less than 24 hours in advance of the scheduled time must be paid in full by the client. The Baltimore Therapy Center reserves the right to charge credit cards on file for these fees. If your account is overdue and there is no written agreement on a payment plan, the Baltimore Therapy Center may use legal or other means (courts, collection agencies, etc.) to collect payment.

Note that personal development coaching is not reimbursable by health insurance.

ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATONS

All e-mails sent from the Baltimore Therapy Center are securely encrypted and cannot be intercepted in transit by third parties. However, you are responsible for the security of your own e-mail accounts and devices. Additionally, e-mails sent by you to the Baltimore Therapy Center are not encrypted.

You may also request to communicate with the Baltimore Therapy Center via unencrypted methods such as text messages. If you choose to use unencrypted communication options, please be aware that any computer, unencrypted e-mail or text communication can be accessed by unauthorized people and hence can compromise the privacy and confidentiality of such communication.

Unencrypted e-mails and texts are vulnerable to such unauthorized access due to the fact that servers or communication companies may have unlimited and direct access to all e-mails and texts that go through them. The following are some of the risks inherent in using these media:

- An unencrypted e-mail or text message might be sent erroneously to the wrong recipient, seen by someone in your house or workplace, or purposefully intercepted by a third party.
- Communication companies (e.g. Google) may be able to access e-mail accounts and text messages.
- Computers, tablets, and cell phones can be lost or stolen.

These risks exist both for unencrypted messages you send to your provider, and those your provider sends to you. (E-mails you receive from the Baltimore Therapy Center are encrypted.) In order to further address these possibilities from the side of the Baltimore Therapy Center, all e-mails bear a disclaimer in case of mistaken recipients, and all confidential data on computers, tablets, and cell phones is password-protected. Baltimore Therapy Center computers are equipped with virus protection and a password. Client information is stored in a HIPAA-secure cloud environment through Google Apps and is backed up regularly into a separate secure cloud. Emails and text messages exchanged between you and your provider become a part of your record and subject to all the same laws and rights of access as any other part of your record.

You are not required to use any of these methods of communication to receive coaching services. You have the right to request unencrypted communications and to revoke your request at any time. If you initiate communication with your provider via unencrypted methods, we will assume that you have made an informed decision to use such communication methods, will view it as your agreement to accept the risks associated with such methods, and will honor your desire to communicate using these methods. You may also choose to communicate electronically via Signal (www.signal.org), a secure and encrypted texting app.
